The Candidate with a history of disclosure.

Dennis Kucinich had just arrived at the Elliott Bay Bookstore in the quaint historic Pioneer District of Seattle from the University of Washington July 19th to talk to a small conversation club. The bookstore overlooks the blue waters of Puget Sound - the location where Seattle's founding fathers first set up shop in the gold rush days. Over the years the bookstore has hosted prominent politicians and authors including Jimmy Carter so it was not surprising when word got out that Congressman and Presidential Candidate Dennis Kucinich (D-OH) would be arriving at the bookstore.

Kucinich - a short dark haired smiling man dressed casual walked comfortably through the small crowd at the cafe, past the espresso line and the grinning faces of Hillary Clinton adorning the cover of her new book. Kucinich took the wooden stage and spoke for a few minutes before eagerly answering questions.

There were questions regarding the Iraq war and relations with Canada but there was one interesting question posed to Kucinich. The question was framed with comments that trust and security are a huge factor with our government and asked in the same vein that Bill Clinton said he would look into the Kennedy assassination and the question of UFOs before his presidency, if he himself would look into these areas if he was elected president.

Surprisingly without hesitating Kucinich said that he indeed felt a great loss with Kennedy and he honestly didn't know if he could ever find the answers to those questions. He then questioned the intelligent life in Washington D.C. which elicited agreeable laughter from the audience but Kucinich then stated in a serious tone we would be arrogant to think we are alone in this universe.

On disclosure, does Kucinich have the fortitude to ask the tough questions and follow through? At least in several instances it seems Kucinich has the background. Kucinich on disclosure used a rare House procedure known as a 'Resolution of Inquiry' to force the current Administration to provide Congress with a copy of the 12,000 page Iraqi declaration sent to the United Nations. People can now view the classified Iraqi document at:

Kucinich then went on in to say we should not be dominating other nations, that we need to be strong and focus on repairing this nation. Dennis then finished with "We are all connected".

Standing up for people and standing up to corporations has been Kucinich's trademark and indeed he has been a person who has walked the walk having marched with Seattle City Councilman Nick Licata in Seattle's 1999 WTO protests.

A candidate with foresight? Kucinich introduced the 'Space Preservation Act of 2001' (HR 2977), which calls for the banning of all weapons in space and would outlaw all research and development for space-based weapons.

Interesting, a candidate that refuses to sell out to corporations, marches with protestors defending humanity and encourages peace and cooperation.

Is it any wonder that Kucinich has the endorsement from Mahatma Gandhi's grandson s?
