We know for certain in January 1993 when Bill Clinton entered the White House in January 1993 that he had an interest in the UFO phenomena because of what Bill Clinton's long-time friend Webster Hubbell wrote in his 1997 book "Friends in High Places." Hubbell reported that Bill Clinton had proposed (in the early days of the administration) to him that if he was given a job in the Justice Department as Assistant Attorney General that he should find out "Are there UFOs?" (He was also given the job of finding out "who killed JFK.")

It is not certain where Bill's original UFO interest came from. One woman came up to me after a lecture in Bill's home state of Arkansas and told me that either Bill and Hillary or someone very close to them had experienced a UFO sighting in the late 1970s. The woman claimed to be a sister to a key person in Bill Clinton's Hot Springs background. She promised to provide me the details after talking to her sister, and I never heard from her again.

Whatever caused the interest there were many stories circulating that Bill was interested. William LaParl, a friend of CIA scientist Ronald Pandolfi (who was asked to provide a UFO briefing for President Clinton's Science Advisor) stated,

"It was known among the high CIA people, and the people who had contact with these people (Clintons) that they were on the prowl for UFOs. He (Bill) had been asking anyone who would listen to him, to tell him the secret. You know, he would get some Admiral in there, and say "By the way, tell me the UFO secret." They would just look at him like "What planet are you from?"

And so the stage was set for Bill Clinton when businessman and philanthropist Laurence Rockefeller appeared at the White House on April 14, 1993 to make his pitch that the President should open up all the UFO files for the American people to see.

Although it is not spelled out in the available documentation, it would appear that Rockefeller, no matter how powerful could not just walk into the President's office and make his pitch for disclosure. He was instead advised by his close friend and former Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird to start his mission with Dr. John Gibbons, the President's Science Advisor. That's where the whole Rockefeller Initiative for UFO disclosure would be played out for almost the next three years.
