During an interview with Bill Jenkins on his Open Minds radio show Peter Hurkos, who is generally recognized as the greatest psychics of all times, spoke about an encounter in the mid 1980s with President Ronald Reagan concerning his psychic ability. Hurkos stated,

"I visited the President in his home. I know the President was very skeptical. A half hour later he was not skeptic anymore."

Peter Hurkos died in 1988. So far no record of the meeting or what Hurkos did to convince the president of his psychic power has been found in the Reagan presidential files.
